Blockchain

A new transaction is entered.

The transaction is then transmitted to a network of peer-to-peer computers scattered across the world.

This network of computers then solves equations to confirm the validity of the transaction.

Once confirmed to be legitimate transactions, they are clustered together into blocks.

These blocks are then chained together creating a long history of all transactions that are permanent.

The transaction is complete.

Yes. It's not just a cooperative campaign. You're supposed to run missions probably with different friends.

biosc1 (brian) Today at 1:01 PM
unexpected, but I'll hold out judgement until I play. I understand the need to try something different as this is the 4th game in this series

Grubb Today at 1:03 PM
These standalone expansions are the games to get weird with.

biosc1 (brian) Today at 1:03 PM
even Old Blood was different in the sense that it had a ton of stealth in the beginning

Say cheese for the story about Discord folders.
